The Hall, or Court of Justice, contains, on the dais, the members of the Court—the Grand Master of the Temple, Lucas de Beaumanoir, the Preceptors, Knights, Esquires, and chaplains of the Order. The rest of the hall is occupied by the guards and attendants of the Temple, and the neighbouring gentry and peasants allowed to witness the solemnity. Amongst these latter is a Saxon nobleman and his Jester, a Saxon serf, and a poor old Jew crouching in an obscure corner, who is jeered at by a boy belonging to the Order. Brian de Bois Guilbert, who has left his seat, and has delivered a scroll to Rebecca, is moodily tracing figures on the oaken floor with his sheathed sword. Higg, the son of Snell, a poor crippled Saxon peasant, who has unintentionally given evidence unfavourable to Rebecca, is being expelled the court.

solemnity, explained to his daughter the disposition the late King had made of his crown . . . and in conclusion himself and Northumberland fell on their knees and paid homage to her as Queen of England. . . . All the moving eloquence of her speech had no effect, and the Lady Jane was at length prevailed on, or rather compelled by the exhortations of her father . . . to comply with what was proposed to her, etc."

74 The Queen receiving the Sacrament (the concluding part of the ceremony of Her Majesty's Coronation) on the 28th June, 1838. The picture represents Her Majesty habited in the Dalmatic mantle (the coronation robe), having taken off the crown on approaching the altar, and wearing no jewels. The Peers and Peereses, who had worn their coronets from the moment in which the Queen was crowned, have now put them off. The sacrament is administered by the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Rev. Lord John Thynne in the absence of the Dean of Westminster, on the farthest side of the altar is the Lord Chamberlain (the Marquis of Conyngham) and the Bishop of London. The sword of state is borne by Viscount Melbourne, near whom are the Duke of Wellington and the Duke of Sutherland. The crown is held by the Lord Great Chamberlain (Lord Willoughby d'Eresby), next to whom is the Earl Marshal (the late Duke of Norfolk). Under the lower canopy are seated the ladies of the Royal Family; nearest Her Majesty is the late Princess Augusta, attended by Lady Mary Pelham; the Princess Augusta of Cambridge, attended by the Hon. Miss Kerr; the Princess Hohenlohe; and the Duchess of Kent, attended by Lady Flora Hastings; and Viscount Morpeth. The other ladies and gentlemen in attendance under the canopy are the Ladies Caroline Campbell and Caroline Legge, and Viscounts Villiers and Emlin. Immediately behind the Queen are the Mistress of the Robes (the Duchess of Sutherland) and Lady Barham (Lady-in-waiting). In the foreground are five of the eight young ladies who bore the Queen's train, namely, the Ladies Caroline Lennox, Adelaide Paget, Fanny Cowper, Wilhelmina Stanhope, and Mary Grimstone. Beyond the coronation chair are the Duke de Nemours and Prince George of Cambridge; and behind it are the Dukes of Sussex and Cambridge, the Duke of Coburg, Prince Ernest of Phillipstahl, the late Duke of Argyle, and two pages of Honour (the Marquis of Stafford, and Lord Mountcharles).

- 482 The Babylonian Marriage Market. “Herodotus records one of their customs, which, whether in jest or earnest, he declares to be the wisest he ever heard of. This was their wife-auction, by which they managed to find husbands for all their young women. The greatest beauty was put up first, and knocked down to the highest bidder; then the next in order of comeliness—and so on to the damsel who was equidistant between beauty and plainness, who was given away gratis. Then the least plain was put up, and knocked down to the gallant who would marry her for the smallest consideration—and so on till even the plainest was got rid of to some cynical worthy, who decidedly preferred lucre to looks. By transferring to the scale of the ill-favoured the prices paid for the fair, beauty was made to endow ugliness, and the rich man's taste was the poor man's gain.”

Among the curious customs of the Ancient Egyptians mentioned by Siculus, that of judging the dead is especially remarkable. Before an important personage could receive the rites of honourable interment, a trial, typical of that to which his soul would be subjected in the nether world was conducted in the presence of his body. Forty-two assessors sat in judgement upon him . . . accusers came forward from all parts. . . . If the justification was accorded, the mummy was anointed with oil, etc.

1840. 786 The interview of Milton with Galileo. "Milton went to Italy in 1638. 'There it was,'
says he, 'that I found and visited the famous Galileo, grown old, a prisoner to the Inquisition.' Old and blind, he might have said. Galileo, by his own account, became blind in 1637. Milton, as

- we learn from Sir Henry Wotton's letter to him, had not left England on the 18th April following, etc."

- 230 J. Black Lye, Esq.
Tudor Lodge, Albert St., N.W.
1844. 382 The parting of Robert Burns and his Mary. "This adieu was performed," says Cromek, "in a striking and moving way; the lovers stood on each side of a small brook, they laved their hands in the stream, and holding a Bible between, pronounced their vows to be faithful to each other. They parted never to meet again!"
- 385 The Good Samaritan. (Long quotation from St. Luke.) 1845. 334 The first love of Napoleon Bonaparte. During Napoleon's residence at Valence, as Sous Lieutenant, 1786, a temporary attachment sprung up between him and Mademoiselle Colombier, only daughter of Madame Boulan Colombier, one of his earliest and best friends. The principal amusement of the young lovers was that of eating cherries together.
1846. 723 An allegory of the Christian religion. The figure habited in white typifies the purity of the Christian religion aspiring to heaven. The Spirit of God in the form of a dove, gently descends upon it.
Christian charity, uninfluenced by human prejudices, protects the innocent and helpless. . . . Hope, with rapturous feelings, regards the Christian religion as the true guide to heaven; whilst Faith is deeply absorbed in the revelations of the Gospel. The skull, the palm branch, and the dead serpent are emblems of morality, martyrdom, and the triumph of death over sin.
1846. 1346 An English Pastoral.
1847. 149 Salvator Mundi.
1848. 308 The landing of the primitive Puritans, or pilgrim fathers, on the coast of America, A.D. 1620. "Driven from England by religious persecutions, numbers of Non-conformists retired to Holland when, after a residence of some years, a portion of them resolved to remove to some part of America. . . . On the 6th September, 1620, the Mayflower set sail for the New World, and after a boisterous voyage of sixty-three days, espied land and were safely moored in the harbour of Cape Cod. On the voyage, and in the cabin of the Mayflower, John Carver was unanimously chosen their governor for the year, etc."—Bancroft.

- 434 Evangeline in the Church.
"Many a youth, as he knelt in the church, and opened his missal, Fixed his eyes on her, etc."—Longfellow.
1850. 51 The parting of Charles I with his two youngest children, the day previous to his execution. "The King fervently kissed and blessed his children, then suddenly rising, called to Bishop Juxon to take them away; the children sobbed aloud. The King, standing, leant against the window, trying to repress his tears."

1851. 378 Portrait of Mrs. William Henderson.
- 720 The Royal captives of Carisbrooke, A.D. 1650. "The Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Gloucester, youngest children of Charles I, were, after the death of their father, conveyed to Carisbrooke Castle. The Princess perpetually meditated on her father's bitter sufferings, until she fell into a slow but fatal fever; one morning she was found dead in her bed, her hands clasped in the attitude of prayer, her cold cheek pillowed on the open pages of a bible, etc."—Miss Strickland.
- 827 A study of a head for a large picture.
1852. 14 The parting of Lord and Lady Russell, A.D. 1683. "Before his wife left him, he took her by the hand and said, 'This hand you now feel in a few hours must be cold,' etc."
- 527 "Oh Father! if you let me call you so . . . but now I come for Dora, take her back, etc."—Tennyson.

1863. 44 The reconciliation of Sir Joshua Reynolds and Gainsborough.
"Sir Joshua Reynolds visited Gainsborough on his death-bed, at the request of the latter, when a reconciliation after their long estrangement took place.
"Reynolds bends his dull ear to catch Gainsborough's failing words, and grasps his hand in friendship—the one all benevolence and tenderness, the other all forgiveness. Gainsborough says—'His regret at losing life is chiefly his regret at leaving his art.' And his last words were 'We are all going to Heaven, and Vandyke is of the company.'"—Fulcher.
1865. 380 Garibaldi at the Tomb of Ugo Foscolo in Chiswick churchyard.
"With profound respect he approached the tomb and deposited a laurel wreath in bronze, bearing the following inscription.
"Ai generosi Giusta di gloria dispensiera è morte."

- 585 Sir John Walmsley.
1866. 518 A portrait.
1867. 425 The intercepted embarkation of John Hampden and his friends, A.D. 1637. "Several vessels were ready to sail with the emigrants, and many with their families were about to embark for

New England; amongst others were John Hampden, Cromwell, Pim, Haselrigge, Lord Saye and Sele, and others, when the King, by an order in council, forbade their departure. There are few facts in history which have so much the appearance of fatality as this."

"There's a Divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew then how we will."

Tudor Lodge, Albert Street.

1868. 348 The forced abdication of Mary, Queen of Scotland, at Lochleven Castle, July 25, 1567. "The insinuating Melville entreated her to sign to save her life. She yet hesitated when the brutal Lindsay, scowling ferociously upon her, swore with a deep oath, that if she would not sign, 'he would do it with her heart's blood, and cast her into the lake to feed the fishes.' In an access of pain and terror, she affixed her signature to the three deeds."

1872. 1020 Columbus at the Monastery of La Robida, A.D. 1471. "Columbus, at this time in the prime of life, careworn and prematurely grey, with his young son, arrived at the Monastery of La Robida. He was hospitably received by the Prior, Juan Peres, a man of great learning, and formerly confessor to the Queen. The Prior was so interested and convinced of the soundness of Columbus's theories relating to the discovery of the New World, that he found him the means of travelling, and furnished him with an introduction for the Queen Isabella, who warmly espoused his project."

one of the heterogeneous assemblage, and, with the old military cap worn by the former leader of the faction,
crowned Delaney as 'Captain Rock,' muttering, 'Upon this Rock I will build my church'; while the Buc-cough, unbuckling his wooden leg, flourished it, with a deep shout that for a

- 160 The spirit of Justice. Painted in fresco in the House of Lords. The figure of Justice occupies the centre of the design, and on either side are the angels of Mercy and Retribution. Immediately in front of the angels, on a level with the tribunal, are seated the judges, lay and ecclesiastical. At the base, on the side of the angel of Retribution, stand the guilty one, and the accuser who displays the evidence against him. Beneath the angel of Mercy are the widow and orphans, protected by their armed champion. In the front, a negro kneels, newly liberated from his bonds, and a free citizen also bending before Justice, unrolls the charter of Liberty.
1851. 6- Caxton's printing office, in the Almonry at Westminster. The designer, the illuminator, the wood-engraver and the book-binder all worked at their several trades in the office of the first English printer, combining with the compositors and pressmen (as here represented), to achieve the first complete book published in England. Caxton (behind whom stands Wynkyn de Worde), is exhibiting to his patron, Edward IV, a proof sheet of that famous production, The Game of Chesse. The other historical persons introduced are the Queen, Elizabeth Woodville; her daughter Elizabeth, afterwards wife of Henry VII; the young princes; the king's brothers, Richard and Clarence; the chivalrous Earl Rivers, Caxton's friend, and the Abbot of Westminster, John Esteney. The scene, so memorable in the history of English literature and civilization, took place in the Almonry, at Westminster.

subjects than the majestic of state, disguised himself in the habit of a common minstrel, and in person repaired to the Danes' campe, who lay like Senacheribs, wallowing in wantonnesse, and secure in their owne conceit from impeach of danger; which Alfred, a most skilfull musician, and an excellent poet, did not a little egge on by his sweet musicke, and songs of their valour, so that he was suffered to pass uncontrolled into the company of their princes, at banquets or elsewhere, whereby he saw their negligent securitie, and by diligent observance learned the designs that in their counsels they intended."—John Speed.

1854. 379 Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke, surnamed Strongbow (sometimes also called Earl of Chepstow, or of Strighul), receives the hand of the Princess Eva, from her father, Dermot Mac Murrough, King of Leinster, in fulfilment of his compact with that lord, and with promise of succession to his throne.

The marriage ceremony was solemnized on the battle field, after the siege of the sacked and ruined city of Waterford, and it was in the midst of its scenes of desolation that the conqueror received the hand of the Princess Eva; at which time, as the chronicler relates, "The famous Strongbow did not celebrate his particular wedding-day, but the indissoluble knot of the Irish allegiance to the English souverainetie, with the same ring which circuled his wive's finger, affiancing that island to this our country."

The picture represents the celebration of the marriage, beneath the ruined porch of the church of the period, and its round tower—the triumph of the invading Norman knights—the submission of the Irish chieftains, the mourning over the fallen, and the burial of the dead.

The period was the vigil of St. Bartholomew, August 23, anno 1171, reign of Henry II.

1855. 78 Scene—lawn before the Duke's Palace; Orlando about to engage with Charles, the Duke's wrestler; characters introduced from the left to the right of the spectator; Dennis (a servant), Oliver, Charles (the Duke's wrestler), Le Beau (a courtier), Duke Frederick, Celia, Rosalind, Touchstone (a clown), Orlando, Adam, and lords and ladies, etc.—As You Like It, act i, scene 2.

1857. 78 Peter the Great, Czar of Muscovy, working as a shipwright, with his "rough retinue" in the Dockyard at Deptford, during the winter of 1697-8, is visited by William the Third, in attendance on whom are Lords Carmarthen and Shrewsbury, his president of Council and Foreign Secretary.

"He (the Czar) is mechanically turned, and seems designed by nature rather to be a ship carpenter than a great prince. This was his chief study and exercise while he stayed here. He wrought much with his own hands, and made all about him work at models of ships."

The memoir writers of the time particularize as fellow-workmen in the dockyard, Menzikoff, Golownin, Galitzin, and Prince Siberski, the latter of whom was noted for his "skill to rig a ship from top to bottom." They are careful to mention, as hardly less familiar companions, a dwarf, a negro boy, a monkey (who, by excessive familiarity, caused some alarm to King William on one of his later visits at Deptford),

It was in one of these mêlées that Desmond, being wounded and taken prisoner, was borne from the field by some of Ormond's men, who made a litter for the purpose, which they slung across their shoulders. 'Where now,' asked the victors, 'is the great Earl of Desmond?' 'In his proper place,' retorted this Geraldine, witty as he was wild, 'on the backs of the Butlers.'"

What admiration of the firmness of those men, who, sending their families to a distant place (Trœzene), unmoved by their cries, their tears, or embraces, had the fortitude to leave the city and embark for Salamis. The distress was greatly heightened by the tame domestic animals, which they were obliged to leave behind, and which, running to the shore with lamentable howlings, expressed their affection for the persons that had fed them. One of the dogs which belonged to Xantippus, unwilling to be left behind, is said to have leaped into the sea, and to have swum by the side of the ship until it reached Salamis, where it died immediately."—Plutarch.

Clamb’ring to hang, an envious sliwer broke;
When down her weedy
trophies and herself,
Fell into the weedy brook.
Her clothe spread wide;
And mermaid like, awhile
they bore her up:
Which time she chanted
snatches of old tunes,
As one incapable of her own
distress,
Or like a creature native and indued Unto that element; but long
it could not be,
Till that her garments, heavy
with their drink, Pull’d the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.”—Hamlet,

 Guinea-pig.
1786. 114 A girl washing.
(There seems to be some doubt as to whether this artist (Maria Morland) was the wife or daughter of Henry Morland. In D. N. B. Mr. Monkhouse speaks of her as Henry Morland's wife, and Bryan says that it was H. Morland's sister who exhibited, and who married William Ward. It seems impossible to discover the Christian name of Henry Morland's wife. I think these exhibits are by the daughter Maria, who married in August, 1786, a month after George Morland had married Miss Anne Ward.)

The Bishops of Lincoln, Gloucester, and Bristol were appointed as Commissioners to try him; the Commission was read by an appointed notary. Ridley, as soon as he had heard the Cardinal and the Pope's Holiness named, put on his cap. "Not," said he, "from any contumacy, or any derogation of honour, but only that it might appear, by this my behaviour, that I acknowledge in no point that usurped supremacy of Rome, and therefore contemn, and utterly despise, all authority coming from him." The Bishop of London, after the third admonition, commanded a beadle to pluck his cap from his head.

1849. 1052 Battle of Trafalgar: the situation of the Colossus, 74, when closely engaged by the Ba-hama, Spanish 74, on the larboard broadside, and the Argonaute, French 74, on the starboard, and the Swift-sure, French 74, endeavouring to pass under her stern to rake her, observing the manœuvre of her opponent, ran up her flying jib, causing her head to fall off, which enabled her to meet the Swiftsure with her starboard guns. The right hand ship is the Argonaute, hauling off,
which was completely annihilated in ten minutes. The Bahama and Swiftsure successively struck to the Colossus.—See United Service Journal for October, 1841.
- 1067 Battle of the Nile: the Defence,
74, having engaged Le Peuple
Souverain, 74, for three hours, reduced her to a complete wreck, and, cutting her cables, is seen drifting out of action. At this moment the Defence lost her fore topmast; she then veered cable, and brought up abreast of the Franklin (the present Canopus, of 80 guns), causing her to strike, having upwards of 400 shot holes in her hull, with loss of main and mizen masts, and half her crew killed and wounded.—
